TED HAWORTH is the film's production designer, and H.R. GIGER has provided special visualizations of the entities from "the other side." The film's director of photography is ANDREW LASZLO, and the film's editor is THOM NOBLE. JERRY GOLDSMITH returns as composer of the film's score.

A Freddie Fields Presentation of a Victor-Grais Production, "Poltergeist II: The Other Side" will begin its worldwide theatrical engagements on May 23, 1986. The film will be distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the United States and Canada, and through United International Pictures in the rest of the world.

Once a beautiful neighborhood filled with sounds of children at play, Cuesta Verde lies abandoned and desolate, a place where the wind whistles through the streets like ghostly laughter. A scarred plot of land is all that remains of the Freeling home, destroyed in 1982 by the most violent episode of psychic activity ever recorded.

Steve and Diane Freeling, along with their children and their faithful retriever, E. Buzz, are happy and safe now, living with Diane's mother, Gramma Jess, in Phoenix. Their nightmare is all but forgotten...

until a stranger calls for little Carol Anne.

In "Poltergeist II: The Other Side,"

CRAIG T. NELSON, JOBETH WILLIAMS, HEATHER O'ROURKE and OLIVER ROBINS return as the terrorized Freeplings, who are drawn back to Cuesta Verde in a climactic battle with the forces of darkness. The stars are joined by a powerful supporting cast that includes WILL SAMPSON, ZELDA RUBINSTEIN, JULIAN BECK and GERALDINE FITZGERALD.

Directed by BRIAN GIBSON for executive producer FREDDIE FIELDS and writers/producers MICHAEL GRAIS and MARK VICTOR, the film will feature an array of spectacular new visual effects supervised by four-time Academy Award-winner RICHARD EDLUND.
